The attack affected the 330 kilowatt electrical substation "North" at Pivnichna, outside the capital. It happened a year after a previous attack on Ukraine's power grid. Dragos Security concluded that the attack was not merely to cause short-term disruption but to cause long-lasting damage that could last weeks or months. The attackers had tried to cause physical damage to the station when the operators turned the grid back on. The attack used Industroyer malware and ha...
