The power station sells the energy it produces to the national utility company, Electricidade de Moçambique, under a 25-year power purchase agreement. The natural gas that the plant burns to produce the electricity, is supplied by Matola Gas Company, another subsidiary of the Gigajoule Group. The electricity supplies (a) the city of Maputo (b) Maputo Province and (c) some is sold to the Southern African Power Pool. Plans are underway to expand the power station to 350 megawatts.

Mozambique's state energy utility EDM and Turkey's Karpower are planning a 415MW oil-fired floating power plant for Maputo - similar but bigger than an existing plant operating in Nacala
